National Christian School Association

The National Christian School Association has a strong relationship with many Christian universities around the country. This partnership provides scholarships at many of the universities for graduates of NCSA schools. In some cases, faculty and staff of NCSA member schools receive college scholarships for their own children as well.

National Christian School Association

The roots of the NCSA date back to annual conferences of Christian school administrators since 1975. The current NCSA began in 1980 as Partners in Christian education, a fraternal organization for schools associated with the churches of Christ. In 1988 the name was changed to the National Christian School Association.
