Harold Pinter - Wikipedia

Harold Pinter's "The Homecoming" almost cried out to be filmed, unlike so many plays that seem stagy or claustrophobic as films. It works even better - because it IS stagy and claustrophobic. And because it depends for its effect on sometimes minute adjustments among a family at war, the camera helps by getting us so close we sometimes want to duck.

So THIS is Pinter? I have finally, for the first time, gotten around to reading the lauded Harold Pinter. What an introduction. For those unfamiliar with The Homecoming it's an extremely strange tale of a highly dysfunctional family, a widowed father and his grown male sons, all but one of whom still live in the family home.

The 'Homecoming' Pinter is describing is Ruth's, not Teddy's. It may be Lenny's emotions towards his mother that ignite his violent feelings towards Ruth, since she is the only women in the house since the death of his mother, who may have been a prostitute (indicated in more than one scene; Sam telling Max he used to look after Jessie when driving her around the West End is one example).
